

New services will help nurseries run safe and affordable premises

1st September 2011

early years from The Consortium has launched a new range of services called The Consortium Services to help nurseries with rising food and energy costs, health and safety responsibilities and complex statutory compliance.

By partnering with leading providers in areas such as telecoms, utilities, food and property management, early years from The Consortium will help nurseries reduce their costs and get more from their budgets.

As well as help with food, energy and telecoms expenditure, The Consortium Services offer support with managing statutory compliance and health and safety so nurseries can feel confident about meeting their responsibilities in owning, occupying and operating their premises. Plus they offer bespoke premises development planning, project management and procurement services to support the successful delivery of building projects.

early years from The Consortium is known for providing cost-effective solutions that are easy to access and simple to order, as well as delivering excellent customer service so nurseries can have confidence that they can go to a known and trusted supplier.

Helen Laver, Business Development Manager at early years from The Consortium comments, "Nurseries tell me that one of their key priorities is to ensure they are getting the most from their expenditure so I am delighted we have introduced these new services, as getting the best value from budgets is at the heart of what The Consortium Services offers."

early years from The Consortium will be exhibiting at Childcare Expo at the Ricoh Arena, 16 - 17 September and will be available on stand C15 to give more information or advice to nurseries looking to reduce their costs.
